It's always a pleasure to look at an innocent face gleaming with happiness. A toddler...... yes, is what I love the most – “Kids!!!”, I go. Their innocence explores every part of my artistic mind. They make me wander in the world of Angels, of Cinderella, of cartoons, of love & the world so wise that can easily forgive and forget with words as simple as “Abba” (the opposite of “Katti”, Remember???) ☺. After all, “Kids!!!” are so truthful, honest and sweet.

Now here comes a shocker. Toddlers grow!!! OK!!! Stop!!! Don’t go too far to the extent of BAGHBAN part of the story. (Don’t you try to watch this ‘family movie’ with your family or you can’t evade the hurtful “Will you be like that baccha too ?” expression off your parents.) Just am talking about the part when those innocent ones acquire some BRAINS. There starts the transition of “Kids!!!” to “Kids???” The ‘aadha gyan’ of the kids plus their attention-getting abilities brings all the hell down on earth for the acquaintances. First of all, they will reveal the “Oh so romantic!!” moments of their parents publically leaving the ‘Decent couple’ blushing. Then they can slap you, punch you anytime anywhere and all you can exclaim is “So Sweet”; despite the inner urge to teach the ‘manner less kid’. Again, they can express their dislike for you in front of your crush (Why do people start playing with kids in presence of their crushes. Anyway!!!). And those techie kids who can use mobiles recognizing the pictures (thanks to Graphic User Interface) gives the worst nightmares when they open your messages to practice their ABC's in front of the family and read out “L-O-V-E Y-O-U S... ummm!!!” Seize it.
And if that is not enough, observe that MENACE created by the DENNIS in your house. The whole house is adorned by their perspective toys n almirahs falls void.

Regardless of everything, kids are sweet and good learners. I actually feel that they are wiser in dealing with relations. They can love & hate within seconds and never fail to let you know their grievances. It’s easier to solve things that way na? So, learn something you ‘actual kids’ from those ‘age wise kids’.

Wait now!!! That cake is meant for all; remember kid, it’s my birthday. So, don’t poke your dirty finger in that.
“BBA N BCA THIRD SEMESTER PAPER LEAKED”

Ahhhhh!!!! a great dreadful news that the students of BBA n BCA students got at the night of 3 February 2013. It was a good news for some and bad for others but an experience for all.

Firstly it was difficult to believe that the paper had cancelled but verified later and some couldn’t even believe and went to center to verify.

It was a bad news for the people who leaked the paper and for them who purchased it “gutsy people” roomers’ if to be believed the paper was sold in the market for Rs. 3000 to Rs. 4000, pity on them. As it was disheartening news for the scorers because their efforts were in vein not exactly but up to an extent “yes” and the next tension was “how would be the new paper?” there was curiosity and nervousness both in fact very different experience.

And finally the day of paper came and most of the people had previous paper assuming with crossed fingers that at least something would come from it, but the actual paper was totally different and that too filled with lots of difference between questions…… but was easy.

And for some students it was good as they got more time for preparation and a bad news for all as we not even got a single day as holiday to celebrate the feeling of exams being over 😊😊😊……

And lastly we all pray not to face such an experience again………. and we all hope for good results keeping both fingers crossed……😊😊😊😊……

Wishing u all the very best @!!
Life is such a wonderful thing,
A reason enough for us to sing.
From the green earth below,
To the heavens above.
Life is found in such abundance.

An exquisite cocktail of emotions it is,
Moments of joy & thoughts, ambitions,
Tears, smiles, hits & misses.
Desires & carvings, be it love or a car,
Some so near & yet so far.

Dreams in life keep us going,
Some flourish, some keep going.
But this is what it is all about,
To try & win, to scream & shout.

The sign of a loved one,
The setting sun, a starry night,
The first rain & may be ever deafening noise,
Oh! So many reasons to celebrate rejoice.

So tackle your woes,
Forgive your foes,
And rise 'n' shine to every occasion,
'Cos Life is so beautiful a Celebration.
Dear Diary,

This song from a series of Satyamev Jayate always brings tears into my eyes as it reminds me of my home sweet home.

As you know, it had always been my desire and dream to live in a hostel, to wonder about life in a hostel, a life full of freedom with no boundations, no restrictions, no one to oppose us for doing something or the other, with no one to seek permission from... and so on and on..... And I always wished to be a part of this place.....

But I never knew that my this dream would come true so early...... yeah... it came true when my papa announced to me that I would be persuading my BCA from I.T.S College in NCR and for that I’ll have to live in a hostel....

“Beta Mann Me ladoo Foota”

This was going through my mind. Each and every passing day I was wondering about my new life in a hostel. The rooms, new friends, food, college, etc...... On one side these thoughts were going through my mind but on the other side a feeling of leaving my home, my family, and my native place was pinching me up....

WO garmiyon ki raat...
WO jade ki baat...
WO Pani Ka matka...
Rasoi ki Yaad....
Saab satata hai Mujhe.....
Ghar Yaad Aata Hai Mujhe.....

Dear diary,

As you know, it had always been my desire and dream to live in a hostel, to wonder about life in a hostel, a life full of freedom with no boundations, no restrictions, no one to oppose us for doing something or the other, with no one to seek permission from... and so on and on..... And I always wished to be a part of this place.....

“Beta Mann Me ladoo Foota”

This was going through my mind. Each and every passing day I was wondering about my new life in a hostel. The rooms, new friends, food, college, etc...... On one side these thoughts were going through my mind but on the other side a feeling of leaving my home, my family, and my native place was pinching me up....
Generally its heard “ladkiya to paraye hoti hain” these words were coming true in my case even when a night before my departure my mother approached me and said, “Beta ab to tu ja rahe hai.....”

It brought tears into my eyes when before leaving my home I turned around and saw my place; I saw tears in my mum’s eyes when I hugged her....

I reached my new place my hostel exited but each and every passing moment was reminding me of my ma, papa, my family.... whenever I use to do something it reminded me of “agar maa hoti to wo kya karta” I faced problems in adjusting at early time coz we don’t knew much about others attitude their thinking and all.... the food in the hostel was good but it had no taste of “maa ke haat ka khaana”.

Whenever I use to wash my clothes it reminds me of my home.

I made good friends but my parents are my best friends so I felt lonely without them. The festival time reminded of my home the things I used to do there the fun I had with my family every moment reminds me of my home....

Although I have now adjusted in hostel and enjoying my life here but “apna ghar to ghar he hota hai”.... I talk to my parents on call, I share my everyday experience with them but in my heart,

“Ghar Yaad Aata Hai Mujhe.....”
The historic two days general strike called by Indian central trade unions on 20 and 21 February of 2013 received unprecedented support among workers across India affecting all vital sectors bringing life to a standstill.

The trade unions’ 10 point demands include measures to contain price rise, employment generation, and strict enforcement of labor laws and universal social security cover for organized and unorganized workers. The demands were jointly made by eleven Central Trade Unions namely BMS, INTUC, AITUC, HMS, CITU, AIUTUC, AICCTU, UTUC, TUCC, SEWA, LPF and Independent Federations of Workers and Employees as decided in the National Convention of Workers in 4 September 2012.

Claiming that the general strike is total in all sectors by all workers, in a press release issued on 20 February, 2013, unions stated that, “the unprecedented response to the call of strike throughout the country much beyond our expectations reflects truly the anger of the people against the persistent increase in the prices of diesel, gas, coal, electricity and other essential goods for the bare need of the common people.”

With vigor and determination and undaunted by police repression and government and employers’ threats, the General Strike continued on the second day, 21 February 2013. Workers from all the major and strategic sectors participated, such as banks, insurance and other financial sectors, oil & petroleum, road transport (both public and private sectors) in many states, defence (civilian), postal, telecom, govt. employees in several states, several departments of Central govt., port & dock, coal & non-coal mines, power and plantation sectors. There was also a large presence of unorganized workers in the protest demonstrations.

The two days of general strike is a continuation of joint efforts by Indian trade unions that started in 2009. Since then to express resentment over anti-labor policies and government’s inaction to protect workers’ interests, cutting across political ideologies, major central trade unions have come together in a single platform and taken a number of actions.
However, further indifference of the government of India forced unions to intensify their efforts and call for a general strike for two consecutive days on 20-21 February 2013 to pressure the Government of India to address some of the basic human and trade union rights issues faced by workers across the country.

At the final moment on 13 February labor minister convened a meeting and appealed to withdraw the strike call. On 17 February, the Prime Minister of India appealed to withdraw the strike and on the evening of 18 February senior ministers held meetings with the trade union leaders. However, as the panel of ministers failed to provide any concrete proposal on even a single demand, trade unions went ahead with the two days general strike

Ten points union demands are:
1. Measures to contain price rise,
2. Measures for employment generation,
3. Strict enforcement of labor laws,
4. Universal social security cover for organized and unorganized workers and creation of National Social Security Fund,
5. Stoppage of disinvestment in Central and State Public Sector Undertakings,
6. No Contractorisation of work of perennial nature and equal payment of wages and benefits,
7. Amendment of Minimum Wages Act to ensure universal coverage irrespective of the schedules and fixation of statutory minimum wage at not less than Rs 10,000/- linked with cost price index,
8. Remove all ceilings on payment and eligibility of Bonus, Provident Fund; Increase the quantum of gratuity,
9. Assured Pension for all,
10. Compulsory registration of trade unions within a period of 45 days and immediate ratification of the ILO Conventions Nos. 87 and 98.

1. Why do you have to go to bed?

2. When can you eat soap?

3. What do you get if you milk a cow after an earthquake?

4. What are the speaking gadgets called that can be found on the end of telephones?

The school teacher was taking the class in basic maths. She said to little Johnny, "If I give you two rabbits and two rabbits and another two rabbits, how many have you got?"

"Seven," replied Johnny.

"No, Johnny," explained the teacher. "That's not the right answer. Listen. If I give you two apples, then I add another two apples and another two apples after that, how many have you got?"

"Six," replied Johnny.

"That's right," said the teacher. "So, let's try again. If I give you two rabbits and two rabbits and another two rabbits, how many have you got?"

"Seven," replied Johnny.

"Seven!" wailed the teacher. "How do you get seven?"

"Because I've already got one rabbit at home!"
From the student’s point of view our center for external examination located at IMS Dasna was a little bit inconvenient. Location was very far from our college campus (ITS Mohan Nagar) and was even difficult to locate. Students from Delhi region found it quite unenviable to locate the center. The environment of the center was good and comfortable for the first timers.
